The Making of 'A Knight's Tale' (TV Short 2001) — IMDb

In the early days of knighthood, in the 10th and 11th Centuries, a young man was made a knight by his father or liege lord, often on the field of battle. The new knight's sword would be 'girded on' (strapped to his waist) and the older man would give him a blow to the cheek with the flat of a sword. This was calling 'dubbing' and was the only blow a knight must take without fighting back.
